The Hong Kong Institution of Engineers

The Hong Kong Institution of Engineers, The HKIE, evolved from the Engineering Society of Hong Kong which was formed in November 1947 as a learned society for bringing together engineers of different disciplines for their common good. The Society flourished and as a result the HKIE was incorporated by the government under Ordinance in 1975. The government has started to recognise Corporate Members of the HKIE as recruitment qualification since 1982. Membership in the HKIE is now the primary qualification for employment as a professional engineer in Hong Kong.

Hong Kong Engineer

Hong Kong Engineer is the official journal of the HKIE and is now published by Printers' Circle Ltd. This monthly journal covers in-depth articles on engineering topics and up-to-date news about HKIE activities, making it a must-read for all engineering professionals in Hong Kong. It is distributed free of charge to nearly 20,000 members, whom are engineers in a wide range of field, including consultants, contractors, civil servants and academics. It has become a trusted and invaluable part of professional daily life for engineers, whether they are HKIE affiliated or not.
